

MAPPING DISARMAMENT IN THE UK: A BRITISH PUGWASH GROUP REPORT

By Martin Butcher, John Finney, Carol Naughton and Henrietta Wilson
July 2011

Introduction

Overview

This document is the current version of the British Pugwash Group's „Mapping Project“. The project aims to develop and maintain a directory of the UK-based non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and individual experts that have a focus on the non-proliferation and disarmament of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. As well as providing a list of contact details, the project also aims to capture a snapshot of current expertise.

If you have any comments about the document – including suggestions for amendments, updates and additions – please contact:
The British Pugwash Group, Ground Floor Flat, 63A Great Russell Street, London, WC1B 3BJ, UK. Tel 044 (0)20 7405 6661.

Context and Research Methods

The „Mapping Project“ began several years ago in response to request from Baroness Shirley Williams for an overview of UK non-governmental work on nuclear disarmament. As a result, the British Pugwash Group and the WMD Awareness Programme commissioned Martin Butcher to survey a number of organisations and collate the results. In 2009, Henrietta Wilson took over the responsibility for revising the work. At this stage, as well as updating the work, the directory incorporated additional organisations, and was extended to include NGOs working on chemical and biological warfare disarmament.

Most of the work for this has been done voluntarily, and the limited resources available to the project inevitably put constraints on it. The project has relied on relatively informal data collection, and an in-depth analysis or assessment of submissions is beyond its scope. We were able to track down some entries via the collective expertise of the British Pugwash Group Executive Committee, supplemented by information on the internet, but in most cases the collection of information relied on organisations and individuals making accurate and complete submissions in response to email and telephone requests. It was not possible to cross-check entries beyond the immediate expertise of the collating team, but we consulted organisations and individuals in successive stages of the research.

Whilst aiming for the directory to be as up-to-date and comprehensive as possible, the team were aware that this ideal is very difficult to achieve. Organisations are in a constant state of flux – not least because funding opportunities change. Further, we can guess that we have not captured all relevant work in our research. Because of this, the document should be treated as a „rolling text“, and regularly updated.

Such factors also mean that there may be inconsistencies in the way the directory represents different groups. For example, organisations are sometimes known by different names (thus, the British Pugwash Group is known at times as „Pugwash“, „Pugwash UK“ etc), and whereas some individuals have chosen to include a title, others have not. Also, different respondents may have interpreted the directory’s categories in different ways. Most of the groups included are exclusively based in the UK; however we have included international organisations where these have a significant UK presence. It should be noted that in general we have followed organisations’ and individuals’ preferences for how they want to appear in the work.

Possible Uses for the Directory

The directory comprises sets of information arranged thematically to link together individuals, organisations and activities concerned with particular issues, followed by tables of reference information, including some contact details. We recognise that the dividing line between some of the themes is „soft“ and that consequently there may appear to be some duplication of entries, but overall we hope the arrangement that we have chosen is a useful one. We hope the directory fulfils its primary purpose of being useful to people seeking expert advice on specific aspects of disarmament, both within and outside the NGO community. It certainly confirms a general view that the UK has a significant resource bank of work in this area that is ripe for exploitation, and starts to convey a sense of the current interrelatedness between organisations.

Beyond this, there are some practical ways in which this document might support the extension and application of work aiming towards the elimination and non-proliferation of nuclear, biological and chemical weapons. Funders may find the document useful in identifying gaps in the existing work, and strengths that could be built on. By providing information on relevant work and contact details of those working in the area, it could assist the dissemination of research and facilitate better use of limited NGO resources. It could help groups to identify and exploit partnering opportunities to create either UK or international partnerships: this may prove useful to groups seeking funding, as some funders have a preference for financing collaborative and / or international projects.

Acknowledgments

The authors would like to thank warmly all those who contributed to the work. As well as those who responded to our requests for information, we are very grateful to Seth Bullock, Sandra Ionno Butcher, Sarah Graham-Brown, Caitriona McLeish, Tom Milne, Julian Perry Robinson and Peter Wilson.

⁷ Please note that the „Organisations“ operate and can be categorised in very different ways. For example, some of the organisations have paying members, while others do not. Several – such as ICAN-UK and Dual-UseBioethics.net – are umbrella groups for collective NGO work, while some are UK branches of international groups.

⁸ Please note that the „Staff“ column includes staff that are paid and those that contribute pro bono (often at a supervisory or advisory level).

⁹ Please note that there are inconsistencies in the titles assigned to people (for example, not all „Drs“ are represented as such). We have chosen to use the titles suggested by the organisations“ submissions to the Mapping Project.
